Happy Evening Bids Mrs Coursier Adieu

On Thursday evening, April 7th, in the Masonic Hall, about eighty ladies were present when the hostesses, Messrs. Good, Lally, Schmitt, and Knowles, entertained in honor of Mrs. H. L. Coursier, who is leaving shortly to join her husband at Nelson, B.C.

The evening was spent in whist and bowling, both games causing quite a bit of excitement and fun. Mrs. F. Lepper was the winner of first prize, while Mrs. E. Turner came second. A number of novelty prizes were given during the evening, and some of the ladies wore the very latest (?) in Easter bonnets.

During the evening Mrs. C. McKenzie sang in her usual pleasing manner, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. J. Tolson.

Miss M. Darragh gave two readings which were much enjoyed by all.

While partners for lunch were found, Mrs. G. Glass played a few selections.

After serving a delicious lunch, the guests were called to the platform, and Mrs. Lally, in a well-chosen voice, voiced the feelings of the entire gathering in asking Mrs. Coursier to accept the gift, "a fully equipped hospitality tray," and wishing her the best of success and happiness in the future. Mrs. Coursier replied expressing her deep appreciation and thanks, and with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and "She's a Jolly Good Fellow," a very happy evening ended.

Mrs. H. Link, who has been spending a couple of weeks with her relatives in Edmonton, returned home this week.

Textile Report Stresses Human Side of Industry

The keynote of the voluminous report that Mr. Justice Turgeon has prepared as a result of the textile inquiry is that industry has a responsibility towards its employees and the community at large beyond its natural responsibility to the shareholders who look to it for profit. This humanitarian point of view is in keeping with modern ideas of capitalism and finds acceptance with progressive employers.

Dealing with industrial relations, Mr. Turgeon expresses the view that employees should have the right to collective bargaining and he notes that since the commission conducted its sittings, two of the larger companies, Dominion Textile Co. and Courtauld (Canada) Ltd., have concluded collective agreements with their employees.

Summarizing the value of the inquiry, the report says: "The great value of the inquiry lies not in this report (which must necessarily be summary and which probably will be found chiefly valuable as a sort of index and guide to the great volume of material produced by the textile industry). The function of the inquiry was to secure information for submission to the government."

As a means of enforcing recognition of responsibility to the community on the part of industry, Mr. Justice Turgeon suggests that "provision be made by statute whereby a company might be deprived of tariff protection if it were found to have acted in a manner detrimental to the interests of the community. It is not, however, to be taken as a general measure of reform, but as a means of responsibility to all employees at all times."

School Trustee Resigns Office

At the regular meeting of the Public School Board held on April 8th last a request was read from the secretary of the Sunday School of St. Thomas' church asking for the use of a classroom at the school for the purpose of holding examinations, and the Board granted the request and resolved that Mr. C. T. Lally be so advised.

A report from Mr. L. Good in connection with his inspection of the public school during March was ordered filed and acknowledged.

The finance committee presented bills and accounts amounting to $1194.53 and on motion these were ordered paid.

The March reports of the two school principals were accepted and filed, and a copy of the attendance officer's report was ordered sent to the department and the original filed.

Mrs. G. F. Coursier submitted her resignation from the Board of Trustees, owing to her coming removal from town, and the same was accepted with regret and a motion passed that Town Secretary Kenny be advised of the vacancy, to make necessary arrangements to fill same.

Farewell Party Mr. & Mrs. Smith

A farewell party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Bibby Jr. on Friday of last week in honor of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Smith, who left this week-end for Vermilion to reside.

During the evening a presentation was made by Mr. G. E. Glass to the departing couple, wishing them much happiness in their new location. This was fittingly responded to by Mr. Smith.

The present included Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. W. Bibby Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Gelling, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Glass, Mr. and Mrs. A. Horne, Mr. and Mrs. V. Nelson, Miss K. Hart, Mrs. J. Davidson (of Dods), Messrs. L. Baxter, W. Keenan and P. Stuart.

Car License Grace Ends April 19th

Period of grace for taking out automobile licenses for the new auto year which commenced on April 1, will expire on April 19, it was announced on Saturday by Hon. Ernest C. Manning, minister of trade and industry and provincial secretary.

On April 19, he said, police all over the province will commence a check-up on motorists and action will be taken in cases where licenses have not been obtained.

The Act calls for licenses to be taken out as from the first of the year, but as a general rule, about three weeks' grace is given. When the period of "grace" expires the check-up will commence in earnest.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Forsyth, who were formerly residents here, were in town for a few days last week from B.C.

Of course, we will all be going to the big Viny Concert and Dance at the Elite on Monday next.

Easter Holiday Fares Available

Winnipeg, Man.—For the Easter vacation which is just around the corner, economical railway fares will be in effect between all stations in Canada, according to an announcement by R. Crookson, Passenger Traffic Manager, Canadian National Railways.

Tickets will be on sale on Canadian National lines from Thursday, April 14th to 2 p.m. Monday, April 18th, and will be good to return leaving destination up to midnight Tuesday, April 19th.

Teachers and students will be granted an extended time allowance during the school vacation.

With the advent of spring-like weather, these low rail fares will enable many to satisfy their urge to get away from the city during the long holiday week-end.

The local high school pupils are to be congratulated on the enjoyable success of their concert in the Masonic hall on Friday last.

Everyone is reminded of the Daffodil Tea which is being arranged by the United Church W.A. in the I.O.O.F. hall on Saturday afternoon next.

After an extended holiday in California, Mr. R. King has returned to his home at Fabyan.

Farewell Present'n To Heath Pioneers

A goodly crowd of friends and neighbors gathered in Heath school on Friday evening, April 8th, to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Alex Jury on the eve of their departure for Victoria, B.C.

Bad condition of roads kept many away who wished to be present. Mr. Jury has farmed near Heath for 28 years, being one of the pioneer homestead settlers of the district, and taking a very active part in all things pertaining to the well-being of the community.

After spending some time in games, contests and singing, Mr. and Mrs. Jury were presented with a memento clock with Westminster chimes from their friends and neighbors. The presentation address was read by Mr. L. Heuraux.

Mr. Jury thanked his friends, on behalf of Mrs. Jury and himself, with a few well-chosen words, stating they did not need a gift to keep their Heath friends in their memory.

A delicious lunch was then served and after everyone present had signed the autograph book an hour or two of dancing concluded a very enjoyable evening.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Jury wish to convey their sincerest thanks for the beautiful clock presented to them by their good old friends and neighbors on their departure for Victoria and to assure them of their lifelong appreciation of the sentiments expressed.

ALEX AND OLIVE JURY

Annual Mtg of Wain-Con Oils

Annual general meeting of Wain-Con Oils Limited was held Friday evening in the Wainwright with President A. B. Palmer, of Vancouver, presiding.

Reports presented showed that the company's well near Wainwright had produced 4,000 barrels of crude oil during the year 1937 and the entire output is contracted for during the next two years.

The company holds 6,181 acres of all rights of which 500 are government leasehold and 5,681 freehold, all located in this district adjacent to producing wells.

The feeling of the meeting was the next oil activity in Alberta would be in the Wainwright district, and that their company is now in a position to take full advantage of it.

Give Emergency Rides on Trucks

One of the much debated questions in this province is the extent to which trucks should be allowed to carry passengers, if at all.

This subject was brought up in the legislature recently when a bill to amend the Public Service Vehicles act was considered.

While the bill as originally introduced included a section that banned trucks from carrying passengers, this was amended to permit such vehicles carrying passengers "in an emergency."

An "emergency," it was suggested during the debate, would include transferring of a sick person to hospital or picking up a person on a route that was not served by a regular passenger bus.

In this province dangers of trucks carrying passengers have been emphasized at different times. Several accidents have occurred in recent years when persons picked up by trucks were killed or seriously injured.

Officials of the Alberta Motor Association, interested in safety on the highways, have made representations to the provincial authorities from time to time against the speed of trucks and careless driving. This application, it is believed, has had good results and trucking firms have been compelled from the results obtained from orders to their drivers to show courtesy on the highway.

Miss Vera Sturhoff, of the hospital staff, spent a couple of days in Edmonton last week.

After visiting friends and relatives in Edmonton for the past month, Mrs. Bert Lallie has now returned to her home here.

Class Member Honored at Party

In honor of Miss Marjorie Courcier, who is leaving town shortly, Miss Marion Lane entertained the members of the United Church Junior choir and Mrs. Wright's G.S. class at her home on Monday evening.

The girls spent a pleasant time with games and contests and during the evening Berta Nordstrom read an appropriate address wishing Marjorie much happiness in her new home. Miss Baxter presented the guest of honor with a small present as a token of remembrance.

A dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

Historical Setting Week End Feature

Here's wild west to thrill both class and mass. It's the old story, heroic white men in conflict with detestable, brutal but cringing villains and wildly savage Indians; a girl in love with a man who admires her but doesn't want, seemingly, to have much truck with her. It's a human story that pulsates to a martial beat.

Under Cecil B. DeMille's artistic technique, with such characters as Wild Bill Hickok, Calamity Jane, Buffalo Bill, General Custer, and the Indian chiefs Yellow Hand and Painted Horse as principal characters, it's a stirring saga of how heroic valor, womanly courage and sacrifice and blood and iron added a vast new empire to U.S. territory. No DeMille picture could be without spectacle and in this one he introduces a new kind of spectacular production effect, a roaring charge of mounted Indians against the shattered survivors of the battle of Grand Island, the torturing of Hickok and Calamity Jane by the Indians, and the massacre of Custer's cavalry at Big Bend.

Played with spirit and intelligent understanding by principals and entire supporting cast, all the substantial features—action, photography and particularly the musical accompaniment—have a definite place in the general scheme. All of them have been applied in "The Plainsman" by DeMille to produce quality thrill and action entertainment which movie fans will be able to see this week-end at the Elite Theatre.

Speaker Lectures on War Pictures

Mr. G. LeBeau held the attention of a large crowd at the theatre on Wednesday last, when several moving pictures descriptive of the war in China were shown, and that gentleman gave talks on the horrors of the situation.

The films shown included "Thunder Over the Orient," "The Bombing of Shanghai," and the recent bombing of the U.S.A. cruiser "Panama."

Both the lecture and the pictures vividly portrayed the terrible devastation which accompanies war, and the needless and practically useless loss it entails.

The silver collection taken up was to assist in buying necessary supplies to be shipped to wounded Chinese in the war zones.

Strict Watch Kept Over Terminals

Ten thousand miles of copper wire are used to carry "Canada 1938" sponsored by the Imperial Tobacco Company from coast to coast of the Dominion every Friday night from 10 to 10:30 p.m. Another five thousand miles of wire are needed solely to maintain a check on the line across which flow the sound waves generating the programme. At all important points in this vast circuit there are terminals, 34 in all, at which attendants maintain strict watch. Should interference due to weather or atmospheric conditions cause the failure of the circuit, the programme can be re-routed through alternate channels which may take the broadcast hundreds of miles around the storm centre.

At each of these terminals is an amplifier through which the sound waves pass. This enables music and speech to be received at the main listening point in Canada. The enormous coverage thus maintained will be appreciated when it is remembered that the average length of the "Hoving Reporter" pick-up circuit used by "Canada 1938" is anywhere between 400 and 3,600 miles which is in addition to the circuit carrying the program to the radio stations. No fewer than 38 attendants are constantly on duty in charge of these terminal points. It is their task to see that every Canadian who listens to the programme gets clear satisfactory reception.

Gravel, Blotter Alberta Roads

Vote of $1,000,000 for main highways construction this year, approved by the Alberta legislature last week, is expected to result in some major road improvements, though details of the program have not been fully disclosed.

One project to be undertaken, it is learned, will be improving of the Trans-Canada highway for a distance of 10 miles or more in the Medicine Hat district. Much of this will be reconstruction, which will be undertaken as early as possible.

Between Calgary and the international border, the "blotting" is expected to be extended, which will be welcomed by tourists.

Several miles of "blotting" also is planned for the Jasper highway west of Edmonton, which, as yet, has not had any first-course hard surfacing.

In the north country, more gravel is proposed, largely for the Peace River highway where 40 miles were gravelled last year.

Much of this year's work probably will be done at Grande Prairie and in the vicinity of Lesser Slave Lake, according to information received by the editor of the Alberta Motor Association.

Departing Members Honored by W.A.

The regular monthly meeting of the United Church W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. J. Robinson last Tuesday afternoon with some 35 members present. Mrs. Waaburn, who was a delegate to the W.M.S. Alta. Conference Branch in Edmonton, gave part of her report.

After the business part of the meeting, presentations were made to two departing members.

Mrs. H. L. Coursier, who leaves shortly to make her home at Vernon, B.C., received a token of appreciation for many years' service in choir, W.M.S. and Ladies' Aid work. Mrs. Vail read the address and Mrs. Burkholder made the presentation.

Mrs. C. Simpson, who has gone to Two Hills, Alta., to live, also received a parting gift, the address being read by Mrs. Curiale and presentation made by Mrs. Tufford.

The meeting closed with Misses Bonnell, who were given a very happy evening, were signed by the hostesses.

ROCK GARDENS

Where the ground falls away very rapidly it will be necessary to arrange the garden in short terraces. On these, rock gardens can be laid out with level stretches of grass in between. Rock gardens are made to resemble miniature alpine ranges, and in them alpine flowers are grown. These are usually tiny short growing things that require little moisture during most of the year. They are specially listed in the better seed catalogues. To hold the sharply sloping soil, fair size rocks of the roughest possible nature, preferably weather beaten boulders, are buried to about two-thirds their depth irregularly throughout the slope. Good pockets of sandy soil are arranged between the rocks. The flowers find a foothold here and trail over the boulders.

Shrubby and trees are arranged as background for these rock gardens. An odd tree or bush near the middle will do no harm as most of the rock plants are accustomed to some shade. If necessary, through the garden, will be placed convenient steps for passage up and down the steep levels. Nothing seems quite as suitable for this purpose as rough flag stones, though a little finished masonry may be used effectively here and there for retaining walls and for sides of the steps.

PERENNIAL FLOWERS

Even a few perennial flowers will add a feeling of permanence to any garden. Coming on year after year they maintain interest throughout the dormant months and because of their quick start they usually bloom ahead of the other types of flowers. While solid perennial beds are very popular another satisfactory plan is to have a few of these plants scattered about the garden for early bloom and fill in between with annuals. This sort of treatment permits easy and thorough cultivation all through the bed before the annuals are planted, a job that is not too easy if the bed is solid perennials. Of the latter there are hundreds from which to choose but for beginners the following can be recommended as a start:

Iris in several colors and heights. Delphinium, mostly blues and purples, tall for the rear of the garden. Hollyhocks, in many hues of pinks, yellows and red, very tall. Phlox, bushy, tall, late blooming, in pinks, whites and reds. Perennial flax in beautiful blue, this is small.

What the Magazines Say

... seldom seems warranted by any front page news, but this is partly because construction is less dramatic than destruction. Just to relieve the general atmosphere of gloom pervading all news pages these days, we list below a few items indicating that the building of a new world is still going on.

In America, the seven leading co-operative wholesalers reported an advance of 28.6 per cent. in 1937, and total annual business of all American co-ops is now half a billion; not a single retail co-op affiliated with the big wholesalers failed in the autumn collapse of general business.

In New York City 6,000 people are moving into modern houses of the Williamsburg public housing development, just completed.

The Rural Electrification Administration really got under way last year. It built 42,000 miles of power lines, bringing electricity to a quarter-million farm homes, most of them members of REA co-ops. Courtesy of Common Sense.

THE MURDER DISEASE

The germs of typhoid, paratyphoid, undulant and scarlet fever, smallpox and diphtheria combined took fewer lives in this country in 1935 than did homicide. —Scientific American.

Dwarf phlox, very early, very small. Dianthus, or pinks, small, perfumed in pinks and reds.

Oriental poppies, gorgeous reds, medium height. Peonies, medium height in pinks, whites and reds.

Columbines, bleeding heart and Baby's Breath.

CONCENTRATE

The householder with only a little land to spare should concentrate on those vegetables which give the biggest returns for the smallest space occupied.

Among such kinds are beans, carrots, onions, lettuce, Swiss chard, spinach, cucumbers and beets. In the lesser-known vegetables are: leeks, eggs and pepper plants, broad beans and coo lettuce. These can be grown in almost any part of Canada. Experts advise the inclusion of something new in the vegetable line each year so that variety can be gradually widened.

MEDITATIVE PRAYER

(By Blanche Marie Peters).
Adored Creator, I thank Thee for all the good Thou art continually pouring into my life.

Teach me how to appreciate more and more of these precious gifts from above, concealed in Thy love for me, Thy child.

Open my spiritual eyes that I may see the riches of Thy kingdom at hand and consciously live in it, one with Thee.

I clear away all sense-made barriers between me and Thee by my constant praise of joyous praise.

My heart is glad and rejoices in Thy loving protection, guidance, and provision for me, which I acknowledge with gratitude.—Courtesy of Unity.

CHILDREN LIKE TO MIND
(By Anna W. M. Wolf)

The desire to win approval is fundamental with children. There are wise ways of using this fact to gain needed obedience and co-operation.

A large number of children were asked, recently, by means of a questionnaire what kind of parents they would like to have. "Would you prefer a parent who let you go to the movies every night if you teased or one who stuck to the decision that had been made in this matter in the first place?" was one of the questions asked.

Quite surprisingly the majority of the children answered in favor of the parent who, even at the cost of less indulgence where movies were concerned, remained hard-boiled in the face of wheedling. In the same connection it is interesting to observe that one child who greeted her mother's refusal to permit her to go to a certain film with loud lamentations and "I think you're mean—everybody else's mothers let them go", also remarked in a more serious mood that she thought it "outrageous" that a certain other child was permitted to go three times a week to the movies.—Courtesy Parents' Magazine.

When Wheat Moved West

OLD ONTARIO AND QUEBEC used to produce the bulk of the Canadian grain crop. But when the prairies were opened up they were found to be better fitted for this type of farming, so they replaced Old Ontario and Quebec as Canada's granary. One result of this is, since the turn of the century, Eastern farms that were better fitted for grain-growing than for anything else have gradually been abandoned. Roofless barns and vacant farm houses on Old Ontario's back concessions show how the tide of grain empire flowed Westward.

MANY EASTERN FARMERS followed the grain into the West. Many others moved into the cities of the East to work in the industries that were growing up there. Workers in the plants of Dominion Textile Company Limited, for instance, have come in great part from the rural areas of Quebec and Eastern Ontario.

SO THIS COMPANY has helped to supply employment in the older parts of Canada for men and women whose occupation was taken away with the great migration of grain farming to the prairies. Dominion Textile Company now employs 7,000 persons, who receive annually a total of $5,000,000 in wages.

Leadership demands constant pioneering—discovering and developing the new and better method of doing the things we have to do.

Time was when the introduction of a new implement was a memorable and historic event, but these were the early days in the application of mechanics to farming operations. Today, changes succeed each other with greater rapidity and even the most revolutionary innovations are accepted with little acclaim.

Not in any period of the ninety years of Massey-Harris history has such skill been employed in the designing of new machines for the farm as there is today. The Company's engineers, in their extensive field experiments, are constantly testing new ideas and developing, under actual conditions, machines and attachments specifically suited to the requirements of the territory for which they are intended.

Thus, whether it be a one-handed walking plow to be used by a native, and even perhaps drawn by natives, on the South African veldt, a power-driven mower to cope with the luxuriant growth of grass on an English meadow, or the One-Way Disc Seeder developed to help the farmer on the prairies of Western Canada combat soil drifting, it is the result of definite scientific research by the Company's field engineers.

And in the motorized mechanization that is taking place in farming operations, Massey-Harris is in the forefront, still pioneering in bringing to farmers the latest developments in Tractors, Combines and other power equipment.

NO NEWS!

We have just completed the job of reading 76 weekly and semi-weekly papers that come to our desk every week, and believe us when we tell you it is no small task.

We have respect enough for our weekly "brothers in distress" to read every one of their sheets every week, regardless of how busy we might be. If we haven't time to read them at the office, we take them home and peruse them there. Being in the business of publishing, we get a big kick out of scrutinizing the different weeklies. Like our own paper, some of these publications are filled to overflowing some weeks while at other times the news columns are "lean," as the saying goes. When we look over a weekly and fail to see anything that might be classed as intensely interesting, we are not like the grouchy subscriber and remark "this is nothing in that sheet" but on the other hand a feeling of sympathy runs through our mind, because we know what it is to issue a paper when news is none too plentiful.

If subscribers to the weekly newspaper possess but as much understanding as the editor of a weekly sheet, particularly in a town the size of Wainwright, we know that there would be less grumbling during the weeks when news is scarce. A good thing for subscribers to bear in mind is that when the weekly paper arrives and does not seem to contain much news there is no person in the community who feels worse about it than the publisher. In other words, if there is no news to print, it just simply can't be printed and that's all there is to it.

Taking the weekly papers as a whole our own included, readers have very little to complain about. There is no country in the world that has a finer lot of weekly newspapers than this fair Dominion of Canada and all support possible should be made available to them—and, of course, The Wainwright Star.

WHEN TO SMILE; WHEN NOT TO

A prominent American recently said that in order to get ahead in the world it is not necessary to be always smiling. He further pointed out that a smile on a usually serious face is the only smile that is really captivating.

Admitting for the moment that this man knows what he is talking about the man who smiles inwardly is the man whom it is hard to down.

A man who smiles in the face of little difficulties soon becomes able to meet greater situations with equanimity of spirit. Things and situations and unfriendly people need not have the power over our happiness that we have heretofore let them have.

You now laugh, inwardly at least, at little things which used to worry you. You are therefore laughing at things which now worry people who are now at the same stage of personal development that you used to be. Then cheer up! You will probably find time to be able to laugh at things which never seem to trouble that serene person whom you so much admire.

MAKING CANADA A Better Place in Which to Live

A Series of Letters from Distinguished Canadians on Vital Problems Affecting the Future Wellfare of Canada

Specialty Written for Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association

LETTER No. 2

Dear Sir,

In your letter you inform me that the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association is striving to promote something and more wholesome living in Canada and you ask for my advice on this subject.

I cannot but congratulate the Association on their laudable endeavor and feel confident it will commend itself to all who have at heart the welfare of our country.

The characteristic feature of our age is that the ordinary source of inspiration for the multitude is derived from the newspaper, editors have therefore a mighty power for good at their command and since you ask my advice, I would recommend that they should impress upon their readers that the observance of the Christian precepts has had a disastrous effect on society and is in a large measure the cause of the present universal social and economic disorder. I would suggest that they should lay stress on the importance of fostering the Christian spirit in the family circle.

The family is rightly regarded as the cradle of society. The training of the children is a duty which nature as well as religion imposes upon the parents. If in their early years children find within the walls of their homes, the rule of an upright life and the discipline of the Christian virtues, the future welfare of our country is assured.

Believe me,
Yours sincerely,
J. M. R. Villeneuve, O.M.I.,
Cardinal Archbishop of Quebec

YOUR BIG OPPORTUNITY!

HOPE VALLEY

Mrs. Roach and Douglas arrived back in the district last week, after spending the winter in the "bad".

A good time was had by all at the dance on April 1st, held in Gileas School. We sure appreciate the turnout considering road conditions.

The meeting of the Junior U.F.A., held in Gileas school on April 6th, was a big success, all members being present and best of all, several new members being signed up. There is still plenty of room for new members, so come on you Hope Valley Young People, let's make our local the best in Alberta.

The Treasurer's report on the dance on April 1st showed it to have been a financial success—we already knew it was a social success. As our president, Art Haddow, expects to be leaving the district soon, Miss Myrtle Taylor was elected president.

We are all sorry to see such an able officer as Art has proved himself to leave us, but we feel sure that the work which he has started now rests in very capable hands. Douglas Roach was elected vice-president.

To facilitate smoother running of the local in the future it was decided to appoint a local convenor and an educational committee. Miss Nancy Trozak was appointed social convenor and Douglas Roach, Russell Taylor and Alfred Pugh were appointed as an educational committee. The question of holding a joint camp this summer with the other Junior U.F.A. locals in this district was brought up and the secretary was instructed to write to the other locals on this subject.

The meeting closed with a spelling bee and a song-song. We have no comments to make as to the quality of either the spelling or singing. Our next meeting will be held on April 20th. See you all there.

A meeting of the ratepayers of Gileas School District to protest the raising of the mill rate on both municipal and school taxes, and the failure of the council of Gilt Edge M.D. No. 422 to make any provision for road work within the municipality this year, was held on April 6th.

The meeting was well attended and many interesting points were brought to attention of the ratepayers. The fact that any increase in mill rate would be unnecessary in the event of a good crop, as back taxes would be paid, while should there be no crop the raise would be useless as very few ratepayers would be able to pay their taxes, was discussed at some length.

On the subject of roadwork it was pointed out that unless some work was done on the roads in this district, one speaker called them "glorified cattle trails"—the ratepayers might not be able to get into town to pay their taxes. It was finally decided to circulate a petition demanding that council allow the ratepayers to work off a portion of their taxes on the

"Up in the Clouds" by Beulah Earle

She wondered about that. What could it be that made this seem so much the same? Much water had flowed under the bridges of the world since that gay night. She had gone two years to the university. Then her father had died and with his insurance money she had taken a secretarial course.

For a year she had been chief clerk in her uncle's law office. But he had gone into corporation practice and there hadn't been any place for her in the new scheme of things. Since then there had been a few weeks' work here and there but for ten days there had been nothing. No wonder she had now forgotten what parties were like. Besides, at the high school dance, she had been in love.

She laughed a little at herself as she thought of that. How mad she had been about Roger Yarnell! And Roger was married now and had a good looking baby and the last time she had seen him he had merely looked fussy to her.

That was the way with love. It made funny-looking people seem wonderful for a little while.

Natalie glanced up at the handsome features above her. Really, he was "Anyways," he told her eagerly, his lips on hers again. In the very kiss, the warmth fled from her lips. Glory died in an instant. That lifting of her heart that had seemed like the levitation of her whole body suddenly failed.

Everything crashed that seemed to be worth while. "Oh," she cried. "I'm sorry about that. I should have seen it coming." "I was afraid," he said contritely, "that the idea might be a bust. Will you forgive it?"

"It can't be done, Mont Wallace," the girl said slowly. "I had just, very suddenly, decided that I loved you. And so..."

She flung her arms out helplessly. It was at the bus station that she made him set her down. There on that yesterday morning that now seemed so long ago she had left her few belongings. She claimed them at the checker's desk and traipsed through the cool, sweet night to a family hotel only a block or two away.

Registering, she chose an inexpensive room and put off the bell boy with smiling thanks in lieu of a tip.

But the smile came hard. Here was lonely night on the heels of a sleep that would not summon even a phantom of this youth to her arms but in the ending she knew some glory burned in her before ever her mind remembered that she loved Mont Wallace.

Consciousness of him went with her to breakfast in the hotel dining room. It crossed the street with her to the morning office of the Express. It stood with her beside the day editor when he complimented her on the story she had done and rattled the agreement of his assistant that she should have a trial on the staff.

Her name was on the assignment book. It thrilled her to find it there. "Follow Wallace," was the assignment.

Natalie had enough of her father's tradition in her to know the meaning of that. She was to bring in another story of the new hero, and she was to telephone him. She was to see him, and spend what she could with him until the deadline of the afternoon paper and perhaps until the final edition, that sporting extra for which she had written the afternoon before.

She was to chronicle every slightest incident in his life of that morning of that day. Yet, strangely, she was not to write the tremendous story of that night at least not as it had burned itself into her heart.

She thought of the eager readers all over the nation who would be waiting for her story. It would be carried on the wire. It would, if she could do it well, bring a hundred million people to sit beside this one man, to question him and to hear whatever he had to say that would reveal the man.

Millions of girls, she knew, would be among those readers. Millions of girls would want to know what this man was like. Girls made heroes of men like Mont Wallace. They would follow him. They would write him. They would send him fan mail and requests for his picture.

And now Natalie knew what she would write. It was one story, at least, that all the girls would read. She took from the pile of rough copy paper that lay beside her typewriter. She flicked carbon paper between the two sheets and then she wrote the line she knew would free her from the rules of newspaper writing that she knew so vaguely.

"By Natalie Wade," she wrote in the middle of the line. It would be a by-line story and she alone of all the girls and women in the world could write it. Perhaps it would not be published. Perhaps when she had finished she would find that she could not let it be published. But it must be written. And the lead wrote itself before her unbelieving eyes.

"I danced last night with Mont Wallace," it read. "I danced with him and loved it. For Mont Wallace dances as he flies, gaily, easily, excellently well. Unwearied by the long grind at the controls of his little black plane, by the prodigious effort it must have cost him to get the plane from coast to coast in faster time than ever man made the flight before, he danced as lightly as though it were the first exertion of the day.

She wrote on and on, in each line something that would give the girls for whom she wrote an instant in the hero's arms.

And as she wrote she thought of that other story she might have written but did not. "I kissed Mont Wallace last night," it should have read. "I kissed the man who flew from coast to coast in faster time than ever man made the flight before, he kissed me before ever he knew my name or I his."

There were in the story she was actually writing some touches of this man's humor, of the physical splendor of him, of the cleft in his chin that had fascinated her and of the brown hair that lay unruly on his brow.

Natalie had lost herself in the writing of her story. She did not know when the day editor came to stand behind her chair and to read the lines she had written.

She did not know when he hurried back to his desk and bellowed for Jimmy Hale, the staff photographer. It was not till she had finished what she was writing and written the conventional "30" at the bottom of her copy that she looked up to find the photographer standing beside her and with him the familiar figure of Mont Wallace.

"Listen, kid, the old man wants a special picture on this."

It was Jimmy Hale's husky voice, Jimmy's slightly bleary grin that backed the request.

"Come on in here now. I've got to make it snappy."

Natalie followed him, a little confused, with Mont trailing behind.

And presently she stood in the cluttered room that was the photographer's office. Mont Wallace's arms were around her once more. And for the picture's sake she looked up into his eyes as she done the night before while Jimmy Hale took the picture that was to tell more than all her story had done and that was to be as caption her opening line—"I danced last night with Mont Wallace."

That was the day that Natalie came to know Jimmy Hale. A likeable boy who swore he couldn't write a line of copy, he proved to be the best instructor she could have had in the business of hunting down news.

Where things happened, there sooner or later—generally sooner—Jimmy Hale would be found with his small car loaded with cameras, lamps and other equipment of his trade.

Because the girl was given feature assignments almost from the first, she and Jimmy were thrown much together and he came to consider her his special charge. The time was to be when Jimmy would call her in the middle of the night if a story broke and together they would race to the spot, Jimmy to prow for significant pictures and Natalie to hunt odd interviews and special details that made good feature material.

Jimmy had unerring news hunches and it was he who, on that first of their days together, swung the car around to the mansion of Jake Marlon, west coast plane builder, and halted under the wide porte cochere.

Land of the Living Dead

By James Saxon Childers

(Condensed for "Readers' Digest")

Devil's Island, most famous of French penal settlements, lies about ten miles off the mainland of French Guiana. The island is a solid rock of 84 acres. There is nothing on it except coconut palms and a dozen small stone cottages.

Prisoners sent there are sent for life, and today it holds only six. They are men who have committed treason or some other crime against France. Captain Dreyfus was on Devil's Island. The most famous prisoner there today is a man who contracted with the government to clear bodies from the battlefields. They caught him cutting off the fingers of the dead for their rings, and putting out teeth for their gold.

Each of these six men has a cottage to himself. He is locked in it from six at night until six in the morning. During the day he may do whatever he likes. He has not duties, except that he must care for his own cabin and cook his own food. The fare is that of the French army, and he is allowed to buy whatever delicacies he can pay for.

The authorities will not tell you the names of these men. What does it matter? they say. These men are dead, only waiting for the incidental fact of death itself.

No one has ever escaped from Devil's Island. The currents around it are so fierce that even a steamer has difficulty in docking. There are thousands of sharks. A French government boat periodically brings food; no other boat ever goes near the place.

Besides Devil's Island, there are 11 other prison settlements in French Guiana, one on each of the two islands lying next to Devil's Island, and nine on the mainland. All together they hold 8000 prisoners. The mainland prison settlements are shut off from each other by pathless jungles and are reached only by river travel.

About 100 years ago France established her claim to this territory, about the size of South Carolina—on the northern coast of South America. She sent out 12,000 colonists, but during the first year 10,000 died from fever and dysentery. France then turned the place into a penal colony, a dumping ground for her worst criminals, and has been using it as such ever since.

Each year the black convict ship Martinier, the only convict ship still on the sea, makes her round of the French colonies, picking up the condemned men. They are loaded there, according to color: half the ship for the whites, half for yellow, brown and black. The officers do nothing about murder or assaults in the hold; it is only when the prisoners go mad and attempt to tear up the ship that they turn on the live steam which quiets them.

Each year the Martinier brings out about 800 men. Of these, 50 will die during the first year; and only two will live to see their homeland again. These are the statistics.

All convicts except those condemned to Devil's Island (who are given no chance whatever, because they have betrayed France) are taken to a trial prison on the mainland. At the end of a year they are distributed, according to behavior, to easy or harsh prisons.

In every prison, except Devil's Island, each man has some small job to do, usually no more than running an errand, or cutting a small patch of grass. He can finish his work in two or three hours, and spend the rest of the day as he likes. The men frequently catch butterflies and use their wings in making designs on table tops and cigarette boxes. Others build rubber trees and make grotesque figures out of crude rubber.

At night the men are locked up in cages, 30 and 40 to each cage. Little can be done about the murders in these cages. No prisoner ever talks; it would mean his death. Frequently the murders are committed in pairs, so that those left alive can say that the two men killed each other.

In these cages there is never any privacy. Prisoners have only a place to hide whatever money they may earn, and that is within their own bodies. Each man, therefore, has an aluminum tube about the size of the first two joints on the middle finger. He puts his money into this tube and pushes it into his body. When it is thought that a man has accumulated as much as $10 or $15 he may be killed for it.

No matter how bad a prisoner's conduct, he suffers no beating or corporal punishment. But men are condemned to dungeons where for one, two and five years they see no light, and no human face except that of the guard who brings them the reduced rations that barely support life. In these dungeons men scream and go mad, kill themselves by knocking out their brains against the walls, chew their arms or gouge out an eye—any thing to bring death or a brief respite in the hospital.

Then there is the blockhouse, for men who have tried to escape and who have been captured. The blockhouse has no beds only shelves. Each man is chained to the stone wall near enough his shelf to lie on it, and near enough the common uncovered bucket which is the only plumbing.

The French are realists; there is nothing sentimental about them. They punish defiant prisoners in such a way that few men can endure it. But the man who shows that he is willing to play the hard game according to the hard rules laid down for him has a chance to work up instead of down. As his conduct continues exemplary, he moves from one prison to another.

With first offenders, France uses a curious system of double sentence. A sentence of seven years really means 14: the man must serve seven years in prison, and seven years living in the colony as a laborer, a freedman in exile. Then if he can pay his passage, he is free to go home; about 400 men in 400 does it. A prisoner sentenced to more than seven years must spend the rest of his life in exile; he is never free to go home.

Even while serving his term, every prisoner on the mainland has a strange kind of liberty. After he has completed his trivial daily task, he may lie under the palm trees and sleep or saunter down to the small wine shops and play dominoes, or he may go to the home of his mistress and spend the rest of the day with her.

In the afternoon he may play football or tennis—there are two tennis tournaments each year. The only requirement is that he go back to prison in time to be locked up for the night.

If a man wishes to he may work at whatever job he can find. If he has a trade, he may follow it. A watchmaker, or a tailor, for instance, may set up his shop inside the prison. If he proves unusually capable, he may be hired by someone outside the prison and assigned to that person by the authorities. The employer pays the man a salary, and the French government $3 a month. The best bartender in Cayenne is an assigned convict.

Once a man has served his sentence and become a freedman, he must earn his own living. He cannot leave the colony, and yet the government does nothing to help him. In Cayenne there are 13,000 persons. One out of every four is a freedman living in exile, and they make desperate efforts to support life. They work as laborers on the roads. They stand in the market and beg the native Negro women to allow them to carry their packages for a penny. To get food these men will do anything—except break a law that would put them back in prison. If a freedman is returned to prison, he goes straight to the dungeons, and the men had rather starve outside.

Most of these men slowly die; but some few work their way into business and to a kind of success. The dairy business in Cayenne, for instance, is run by Arat freedmen, and other freedmen run nearly all the shops in the town.

Such successful freedmen almost all have families. Of course, the law forbids marriage. But in a community where one person out of every three has leprosy, and one out of every five elephantiasis, no one worries about the incidental fact that nine tenths of the children born are illegitimate. In fact, if a father wants to claim paternity, he must make out an affidavit.

Thus a few exiles have settled down in Guiana to make the best life they can; but virtually all the others dream of escape.

Despite the loose system of surveillance, however, only about 20 men each month actually make the attempt. They are held back by fear. For the road to freedom lies through an almost impenetrable jungle, the home of the jaguar, the bushmaster—the most deadly of all snakes—armies of flies that sometimes attack in swarms and kill a man. Or the fugitive may fall exhausted, to be set upon by the red ants. "When the ants come," one prisoner told me, "the man is lucky if he still has strength enough to cut his throat."

But if he escapes all this, there are still the black men of the bush who track down the prisoner and return him for the reward of $3. And if he gets through the jungle and the trackers don't find him, there are still the police of Dutch Guiana and Brazil and Venezuela waiting to return him according to treaty.

The French authorities believe that of the 250 men who attempt to escape each year, one or two may actually get through to freedom. A hundred of the others are captured and returned.

"And the others? Why, the others—Monneur, have you ever seen the red ants?"

THE STRONG RIGHT ARM OF CANADA

RECEIVING deposits or making loans, Canada's banks are dealing largely with other people's money. Parliament has placed the strictest safeguards around the handling of other people's money.

When you deposit, or when you borrow, the strong right arm of the nation itself is thrown about you, for banking is subjected, through The Bank Act, to greater Government regulation, stricter supervision and more penetrating Parliamentary scrutiny than any other business in Canada.

Banks assemble the surplus funds of millions of Canadians, mostly in small sums. Based on these deposits, and their own resources, they make credit available where needed, for agriculture, commerce, industry, lumbering, mining, fishing, transportation, markets, governments, municipalities and individuals.

These are grave responsibilities. In discharging them the banks are well supervised.

Charters of all Canadian banks expire at the end of every ten years; they can be renewed for no more than ten years and then only after the most searching parliamentary investigation of the whole business of banking. Can you name any other form of enterprise in Canada in which every company's charter expires at one time? Or which has to undergo parliamentary investigation as a condition to continuing in business?

Parliament can, of course, amend The Bank Act at any time, but every ten years that Act is thrown open for what is known as the "Decennial Revision". Bank officers are called before the Banking and Commerce Committee of the House of Commons. They are examined and cross-examined by members and every phase of banking is fully disclosed.

It is a large committee which includes many of the ablest minds in Parliament. Every province and every political party is represented on it, so that Canadians do not lack in any sense for the most penetrating examination of the business of banking.

Canadians as a people thus regulate the business of banking through their elected representatives. Into The Bank Act, by reason of the work of this Committee over the years, have been built all of the safeguards prompted by experience.

In addition, Canada's chartered banks are supervised in various other ways and operate under almost continuous scrutiny. Shareholders appoint their own auditors—chartered accountants—who closely examine each bank's affairs.

Then there is an Inspector General of Banks, an officer under the Minister of Finance, whose duty it is to keep a close eye on the year a vigilant eye upon banking operations. He has access to all bank records.

Banks have to make statutory returns to the Minister of Finance and to the Bank of Canada, periodically. Heavy penalties are provided for neglect to make them or if they contain falsity or deceit.

Each month they must report to the Government the total of loans made to bank directors or to firms in which they are partners, and of loans which directors guarantee. The returned January 31st, 1936, shows that the total of such loans does not amount to over 1% of the total of the total bank loans.

There is no "money monopoly" in banking. Any group of responsible people who will get $200,000 capital subscribed and half of it paid up, and who fulfil the requirements of The Bank Act, can start a bank. The requirements are devised to safeguard the people against fly-by-night promoters.

Up till 1934 chartered banks issued their own notes to the amount of their paid-up capital and might, on occasion, exceed that sum under definite and rigid legal limits.

In establishing the Bank of Canada, Parliament provided that for ten years from and including 1936, there should be a steady year by year reduction in the note circulation of the chartered banks.

We can issue our own notes now only up to 85 per cent. of our paid-up capital. Each year, as this reduction takes place, the note issue of the Bank of Canada increases.

Thus it must be seen that banks have never had an unlimited power to issue notes—they have always been definitely restricted by Parliament, with heavy fines as penalties for any breach of these restrictions.

There is no mystery about the work of Canada's chartered banks—their doing as an open book to the Dominion Government, through the Minister of Finance, his officers, and the Bank of Canada.

The chartered banks are controlled by specific laws, regulations and restrictions designed for your protection as depositor, note-holder or borrower. Their work is to safeguard the thrifty, promote the flow of trade and commerce and to facilitate the transfer of goods and services.

If you're convicted of carelessness in which a person or car is damaged, and you are unable to settle all claims promptly, your car license will be cancelled and you will not be allowed to drive a car again. An insurance policy covering injury to persons, or the other car, or fire and theft of your own car costs only from $18 to $20 per year, according to the value of the car you drive; but this policy can only be issued to a driver who has had no accidents for three years. Joe Welch, car insurance.
